THE CARNEGIE HERO MEDAL.

Not long ago THE HERALD noted in its local columns the rescue of the editor from a watery grave in the tawny flood of the Red river by two heroic ladies of this town, Mrs. Emma Evans and Mrs. Ada Kash. It was suggested in the article that in addition to the sincere thanks of the editor, the ladies should have a Carnegie medal for heroism. Our able and distinguished contemporary, the New York Sun, which is published in Mr. Carnegie's home town, has reported the story on its editorial page under the heading "Kentucky Candidates for the Carnegie Hero Medal," and as Mr. Carnegie always reads The Sun and cherishes it highly, we should not be at all surprised if a couple of medals were received in Hazel Green ere long. But don't we get anything for falling in and giving the ladies a chance to pull us out?

The Hazel Green Oil and Gas Co. are continually and continuously complaining of the waste of gas by the consumers. Reversing the old saw, "Saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung hole," is so applicable that we must needs use it. For instance: In a few instances called to mind where a kick was made because a light was burning in daylight, while in one case the gas from the main stem in the regulator was escaping continuously for several hours. A number of times the same thing has occurred, but we have never mentioned the affair. However, when complaint is made on the "Penny wise and pound foolish" principle, it is time to call a halt. One time for 48 consecutive hours the gas escaped from the regulator near THE HERALD office continuously and that, computed with the light case, would account for more wasted gas than all that has been wasted by the consumers since the line was first constructed.

THERE has recently been so much talk about the origin of aeroplanes or flying machines that the editor of this paper is reminded of one that was constructed in Lexington, in the late 40's or early 50's. It was built in the old Bruen factory on Water street and constructed on the line of the American eagle. Its weight was several tons, and when steam, its propelling power, was applied it literally flapped the life out of itself. One who was present at the trial told the editor of this paper 40 years ago that had not the machine been strongly cabled it would have torn the roof off the foundry. We forget who the man was that conceived the idea and constructed the machinery, but while he mastered the propelling power he failed to counteract with a governor. Mr. Vaughn, who recently retired from the L. & N. shop, can probably tell all about it. Anyhow, there is a whole lot of unwritten history about Lexington that space writers could build up to some advantage. It is not generally known, for instance, that before Fulton started his steamer on the Hudson, Prof. Barlow, of Lexington, propelled a boat in Town branch, and the model was destroyed during the civil war.

In many instances correspondents have their letters delayed and sometimes entirely omitted because of addressing them to individuals connected with the office. If all correspondents will bear in mind to address their letters, "Special Correspondence to THE HERALD, Hazel Green, Ky.," there will be no delay. Sometimes when letters come addressed to an individual the party may be sick or absent and the letter is laid aside. When addressed to the office there is always some one on hand to attend to the business.

From a number of our exchanges we note the people of the towns have set aside a day when everybody turned out and gave the streets and alleys, highways and byways, a thorough cleaning. Why not have a general cleaning-up day in Hazel Green? Who will take the lead in this sanitary work?

The A.-Y.-P. Exposition.

Seattle, April 10.—Kentucky will participate in the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle this summer and is prepared to make a creditable showing at the great Pacific exhibition. Edward M. Flexner, chairman of the Kentucky exposition commission, recently appointed by the governor, is in Seattle to make arrangements for participation at the fair. While it will not be possible for Kentucky to undertake anything in the way of a state building, or very much in the line of a very large state exhibit, funds being raised by private subscription and by the aid of commercial organizations throughout the state assures excellent representation at Seattle for this grand old commonwealth of the south.

Commissioner Flexner is arranging for space in one of the exhibit palaces on the grounds and Kentucky's display will, no doubt, be given a prominent location in the agricultural building. This structure has a frontage on the cascades and geyser basin, the central ornamental features of the fair. The space will also provide a room to be used as a headquarters for visitors.

By the time the Kentucky exhibit reaches Seattle the fair will be complete to the smallest detail. On March 1 the exposition was more than 95 per cent complete, and thousands of workmen are now busily engaged in completing a few remaining buildings and adding the finishing touches to the landscape features. The exposition is now called the fair that is ready in Seattle. For all of the larger exhibit buildings are complete and the government is just completing a group of handsome structures at the head of the cascades.

Dialogue in Song.

In a certain Georgia town the Presbyterian and Methodist churches are quite near each other. Some one passing between the two churches on prayer meeting night heard this spirited dialogue in song: Presbyterians—"Will there be any stars in my crown when at evening the sun goeth down?" Methodists answered in full chorus—"No, not one; No, not one."

An Old Debt.

We wonder how many citizens of Kentucky are aware that Kentucky may be called upon to repay the Government nearly a million and a half of dollars. We presume those who keep themselves particularly well informed about the affairs of the State know this fact, but it was an utter surprise to us when we read it in an editorial in the New York World, which is as follows:

The States in Debt to the Government.

Twenty-six States, all of them lying East of the Mississippi river, except Missouri and Arkansas, are affected by Representative Murdock's bill directing them to return the sums deposited with them by the United States Government out of its surplus revenues under the act of 1836. For 70 years they have had the use of $28,000,000 without interest.

During Jackson's second term propositions for distributing the public lands had been common, and were followed by others to distribute the revenues from that source. In 1835 it was estimated that for the following eight years there would be an annual surplus of $9,000,000. Calhoun was at the head of the Senate committee which submitted a plan for the distribution of this surplus revenue, a proposal that Benton opposed on the ground that the money should be devoted to the national defenses. Calhoun proposed that the sum be divided into as many shares as there were Senators and Representatives, adding two for each Territory and the District of Columbia, and that the shares be allotted on that basis.

Nothing came of the Calhoun bill that year, but in 1836 the Senate passed a similar measure, both Clay and Webster supporting it. The House was unfavorable to it, but finally a compromise was agreed upon which provided, instead of a distribution of the surplus, that it be deposited with the States in proportion to the representation in Congress, to be returned when Congress should call for it. It was called a deposit with the States, and the faith of the States was pledged for its return. Only three installments were paid to the States, as Congress suspended the deposit system in 1839, although it provided that past deposits should remain with the State "until otherwise directed by Congress." The Murdock bill merely puts into effect this last provision.

The following amounts approximately were deposited with the States:

Maine, $956,000;	Maryland, $956,000;
New Hampshire, $669,000;	Vermont, $669,000;
New Massachusetts, $1,338,000;	Connecticut, $765,000;

In most of the States these Government deposits have been absorbed in the general funds and disappeared. New York, however, has kept a separate account of its deposits, using the fund to make real estate loans through special commissioners in each county and turning the interest into the school fund.—Lexington Herald.

Why Assessments Are Raised.

At a recent meeting of the State Board of Equalization Clark county, which had been raised 5 per cent on land and town lots, was reduced to the original assessment. John Garner, of Winchester, a member of the board, who was explaining why Jefferson county's assessment had been raised, tentatively, said:

"According to the assessments as turned in, Clark county, with only about one-tenth the population and about one-twentieth the wealth, pays one-half as much on diamonds as Jefferson county and I'll bet that I can name twenty people in Louisville each of whom has more diamonds than are owned in the whole of Clark county. The deposits in the banks in Louisville were over fifty million of dollars, according to the bank reports, but the taxpayers turned in only $1,500,000, just about what the deposits are in one bank in Winchester," continued Mr. Garner. The only way we can reach these personal possessions is by raising the assessment on lands. This automatically raises the assessment on personal property.

Commercial Convention.

More than a hundred delegates have been named to attend the commercial convention to be held in Louisville April 23. The meeting will be held at the Seelbach Hotel under the auspices of the Louisville Commercial Club. Owing to the rapidity with which the plan grew, it was found advisable to have two sessions instead of one. The first will begin at 10:30 a. m., and the second at 2:30 p. m.

Gov. Wilson has accepted an invitation to be present and speak. Others who will make addresses are Attorney-General James Breathitt and Senator Thomas A. Combs, of Lexington, who will speak on revenue and taxation; J. W. Porter, of Lexington, who will talk of the State Development Association; Prof. W. J. McConathy, of Louisville, on county museum clubs; J. P. Atkinson, Earlinton, on forestry, and Dr. J. H. McCormack, of Bowling Green, on the state health. Five-minute talks will be made by delegates present. In the evening there will be a banquet at which informal talks will be made by the representatives of the various counties. Invitations sent out to this have advised delegates not to bring their dress-suits, as it is to be a gathering of the plain people.

Among the counties which have named representatives thus far are Anderson, Ballard, Barren, Boone, Breckenridge, Carroll, Casey, Crittenden, Daviess, Edmonson, Elliott, Estill, Franklin, Green, Hart, Hopkins, Lyons, Marion, Monroe, Montgomery, Nelson, Pulaski, Spencer, Trigg, Trimble, Washington and Woodford. County judges and commercial clubs appoint representatives.

If you want a favor of a friend ask for it straight and plain. No amount of palaver in advance will make the favor less easy to grant.

THE VERY BEST.

Have any of our readers seen a recent copy of the Cincinnati Weekly Enquirer? If not, it will pay to send for a copy, if for no other purpose than to note its present great worth as an educator in all things that tend to make life prosperous, and home, the happiest place on earth.

The editor by asking its readers to criticize and suggest improvements; and following advice thus obtained is enabled to produce a paper that exactly fits needs of a family and a material aid to father, mother and children in reaching that higher level in social life, where content and comfort reign supreme.

Father obtains ample information that guides in the where, when and how to regulate and increase the income from his efforts. The mother in management of household affairs, practical economy, government of children, and other duties that makes her toil a labor of love. Children's minds and hearts are freed from thoughts of questionable amusements and frivolities of life, and encouraged to emulate all that is helpful in planning for a useful future in life.

The Grand Idea being that; "As are our Homes, so will be the Community, State and Nation."

A most desirable help, is a non-sectarian sermon each week, as preached by that Biblical Student Pastor Chas. T. Russell; a forcible reminder of the spiritual and temporal rewards gained by righteous living as preferable to a Godless life that brings nought but misery to the home.

Other departments and features are above the ordinary, the unanimous verdict of its readers being: "The cleanest and best family Weekly known to them."

Sample copies may be had by writing to THE ENQUIRER COMPANY, Cincinnati, O.

Since May, 1906, Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been entirely free from alcohol. If you are in poor health, weak, pale, nervous, ask your doctor about taking this non-alcoholic tonic and alterative. If he has a better medicine, take his. Get the best always. This is our advice.

Will Ross, a well known character about town, ran amuck Tuesday afternoon, and after smashing a showcase in J. T. Day's store spent the night in Castle Rose.

Al Dye, well known around here as carpenter, contractor and builder, will leave some time this week or next for Covington, where he has secured a situation for a year or more.

Bro. Owsley, the war-horse of Middlesboro, will fill the appointment of Rev. Mr. Ragan at the M. E. church at this place Sunday next, and our readers will do well to make a note of the fact.

A very prolix letter from A. L. Henry, Tuttle, Okla., giving an account of the safe arrival of himself and wife at that place, is unavoidably crowded out on account of its extreme length and lack of space.

Through an oversight we last week failed to mention that according to the program laid out, the ladies of the cemetery association, together with a number of willing workers, cleaned up the "city of the dead" by clearing away all the brush, briars, dead grass, etc., burning up the refuse and making the cemetery take on the semblance of a beautiful park.

An interesting news letter from Daysboro was received this week, but not knowing who the writer is, as no name was signed, according to our rule same is excluded. If you want your correspondence published sign your full name, not for publicity but for authenticity, else the communication will be consigned to the waste basket. This holds true in all cases where the writer is not personally known to us.

House-Cleaning Time.

Father, dear father, come home with me now, for ma has some carpet to beat; she's got all the furniture out in the road, from the front door clear down to the street. The stove must come down and be put in the shed, and the yard must be cleared of dry grass, it's time to clean house and the deuce is to pay and the front window needs a new glass. Father, dear father, come home with me now, and bring me some bologna and cheese; it's almost twelve o'clock and there's nothing to eat—I'm so hungry I'm weak in the knees. All the dinner we'll have will be scraps and such, and we'll have to eat standing too, for the table and chairs are all out in the yard; oh! I wish spring cleaning was through. Father, dear father, come home with me now, for ma is as mad as a Turk; she says you're a lazy old thing, and that she proposes to put you to work. There's painting to do and paper to hang, and windows and casings to scrub, for it's house cleaning time and you've got to come home and revel in suds and cold grub.

A Worthy Family to Leave.

H. J. Derthick and his very estimable wife will leave Tuesday next for Livingston, Tenn., where they will locate for the future. That is the place where the new C. W. B. M. school is to be located, and Mr. Derthick will work to build up that as he has to promote Hazel Green Academy. While it may be best for the interests of the C. W. B. M., the people generally in and about our town are selfish enough to wish that it were so these two beloved people could remain with us. It is with no intent to flatter, but the true feeling of the people when we say that no two people ever left this town who will be more sincerely missed, and we have had some mighty good people go hence. They carry with them the best wishes of our people, and their children are perhaps as popular in their own class.

Steve James Very Ill.

Steve James, the orphan son of Jimmie James and wife, both of whom died when he was quite small, was taken with pneumonia Wednesday of last week. He is rather delicate, and grave fears are entertained as to his recovery. We believe we state the consensus of opinion of the entire community when we avow that he has the sincere sympathy of every citizen in town and the surrounding country who knows him. He is one boy of whom it can be truthfully said, "He is as near perfect as boys ever grow to be." Indeed, orphan as he is, everybody seems to be his friend, and it is earnestly hoped that he will pull through this trial, for he sure has the elements of an exceptional man when once he fully develops.

Will Have New Depot.

The Lexington and Eastern railroad, which is the natural outlet from this section to Winchester, Lexington and other parts of the Bluegrass, and, in fact, to every part of the world, is contemplating many improvements in the equipment of the road this summer. Among the most important thus far made public is the building of a new brick and concrete passenger depot at Winchester to take place of the ramshackle building now used for that purpose. The new edifice when completed will be an ornament to Winchester and the finest on the entire line between Lexington and Jackson.

George Rice and Taylor Whaley have contracted with Cecil Bros. to build their storehouse, and began putting down foundation last week. The building will be 28x56 feet, with stone foundation on one side and heavy peeled locust post on the other. The contractors have until July 1, 1909, to complete the work, but without bad luck hope to have it ready before that time.

S. F. Reynolds, who has been visiting relatives and old friends in Owsley county for a few days, returned home Sunday afternoon.

A social was held at the home of Raleigh Cecil and wife, on Gillmore, Friday night, and among the amusements was candy pulling. Misses Cora Murphy, Bertha Rose and Betty Cecil, who were participants, sent the editor and his better seven-eighths some of the toothsome candy pulled by the pretty maidens present, for which they have our thanks.

Scottsburg, September 13 to 17.
STATE FAIR, Louisville, Sept. 13 to 18.

Henry Cecil had the misfortune to lose a valuable work mule by death Saturday night, and being sick in bed, things look very gloomy to him just at present, but he is getting some better and may yet discover that "behind the clouds the sun still shines."

The process of wearing out is a very painful one. The pains and aches a man feels after he passes 50 never cease until they have laid him in the grave.

In Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak; there is a lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapiesin.

KENTUCKY KERNELS

Carefully Collected and Concisely Chronicled.

While tearing down an old building in Lexington, two laborers found an old iron pot containing $8,500 in gold and silver coins.

Nelson Bishop, of Morgan county, who was sentenced to the penitentiary in June 1908, to serve two years for voluntary manslaughter, has been granted a pardon by Governor Willson.

John Jones, an Ohio county farmer, in trying to rescue his little four-year-old child from the coils of a large rattlesnake was bitten by the reptile and died an hour later. The child was not hurt.

While plowing in a field near Cropper's Station, in Shelby county, Thomas Donovan, a farm hand, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. Both horses he was driving were also killed.

At the local option election last week Boyd county and the city of Ashland went "dry," while Cattlesburg, in the same county, went "wet." The dries will contest the Cattlesburg election.

In a fight over family troubles at the home of Curtis Bellew, in Carter county, Lewis Bellew, a brother, was shot and killed, Curtis Bellew shot in the back and John Atkins shot in the hip.

Because he had a suit of clothes striped from him in a street car accident at Frankfort, F. H. Preston, of Paintsville, has brought suit against the Kentucky Traction Company for $5,000 damages.

J. J. Kennard, aged 63 years, committed suicide at his home in Mason county by shooting himself in the head with a shotgun. He had been despondent for some time on account of suffering from a cancer.

McKee Bros., of Woodford county, who had in a 60-acre crop of potatoes last year, will put in 175 acres this season. They realized handsomely on last year's crop and claim that it made them more money than tobacco at 15 cents.

Harry Hall, a section fore-man near Ashland, was shot and fatally wounded by his wife. He returned home unexpectedly and found the house locked. He then tried to force an entrance and was shot. Mrs. Hall was arrested.

Because he thought he was paying too much rent for a large farm he was cultivating near Thompson Station, in Clark county, Elmer Cook committed suicide by blowing off the top of his head with a shotgun. He leaves a widow and three children.

The jury in the case of James H. Parrish, president of the defunct Owensboro Savings Bank and Trust Company, on trial on the charge of accepting a deposit in a bank he knew to be insolvent, returned a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at five years in the penitentiary.

G. L. Kirkpatrick and J. Will Clay, of Mt. Sterling, have leased the large warehouse of Capt. C. H. Perry, which in connection with their own warehouse will give Mt. Sterling the largest tobacco prize warehouse in Kentucky. The capacity will be 100 hogheads per day direct on the cars without hauling.

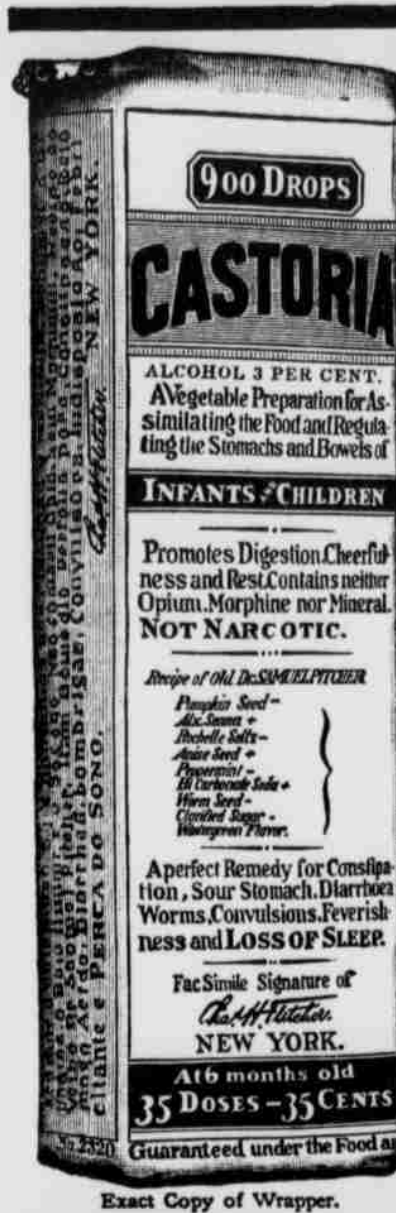

At the regular April term of the Breathitt Fiscal court Charles Terry, former treasurer, was elected county treasurer by a vote of four to three, one justice not voting, over Dr. A. M. Arnold. Mr. Terry agrees to do the work of the treasurer's office without charge or expense to the county. A school tax of 50 cents on the $100 was ordered.

Judge Charles E. Booe, late clerk in the state auditor's office, who is serving a five years' sentence in the penitentiary, was taken before Franklin Circuit court and given two more sentences of three and five years, respectively, making thirteen years in all. The other thirty-odd indictments against him will be dismissed. Counting off good behavior Booe will be a free man in ten years.

Warden Mudd, of the Frankfort penitentiary, has under consideration a prison reform which, it is thought, he will soon endeavor to have enacted into law. His plan is to have all prisoners under sentence of two years or less put to work on the roads, while the long termers are kept at work inside the prison walls. He thinks that under this plan Kentucky would soon have the finest roads in the country.

After an all night search for Ben Brame, an 18-year-old negro, who attempted to criminally assault Miss Ruth Gee, the 17-year-old daughter of William Gee, a prominent Trigg county farmer, he was found and brought before the girl and her sister, who identified him. Restraining the father from shooting him, the mob, numbering nearly 300, took him to a tree on the Trigg and Christian county line, hanged him and quietly dispersed.

The pains of rheumatism are almost invariably relieved with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They also overcome that nervous irritation which prevents sleep because they soothe the nerves. To chronic sufferers they are invaluable. When taken as directed, they relieve the distress and save the weakening influence of pain, which so frequently prostrates. Many sufferers use them whenever occasion requires with the greatest satisfaction, why not you? They do not derange the stomach nor create a habit. Why not try them? Get a package from your druggist. Take it according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

AN ARMY MAN'S CLOSE CALL BY BUFFALO BILL

FROM "TRUE TALES OF THE PLAINS"
COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY WILLIAM F. CODY

ONE of the most thrilling personal experiences that I ever heard of was that of Lieutenant De Rudio, who was cut off from Reno's command at the Little Big Horn and spent two days and nights filled with such narrow escapes and blood curdling dangers as to make, under the conditions, the most callous man's hair stand on end.

In the fight he was guarding a pony crossing with eight men, when one of them said: "Lieutenant, get your horse—quick! Reno's retreating." But as no trumpet had been sounded and no order had been given he hesitated and waited for the call. As the men had seen the others retreating, they unceremoniously left, and De Rudio, seeing the guidon left behind, rode back to get it, which he did, but saw thirty-five or forty Indians coming. He dashed off, and they fired a volley; but, leaning low on his horse, it went high over him. He rode into the thick underbrush, when they fired many shots into the woods, the bullets cutting the branches all around him. He crossed the creek, scrambling up the bank, when suddenly he saw hundreds of Indians in front of him, not fifty yards distant, shooting at the retreating soldiers, with their backs toward him. He instantly saw that he was entirely cut off. While thinking how desperate a run for it it would be, the thought of wife and children nerved him, and he was about to brave it when a young Indian about thirty yards distant on his right fired and killed his horse. The shot attracted the other Indians, and De Rudio jumped down the bank, hiding in an excavation, and several volleys were fired, so accurately seemingly that the Indians thought he must be killed.

A terrible yelling began among the Indians, and all at once the firing ceased. Peering out, he saw the cause. Captain Benteen's column was coming over the hills and had attracted their attention. It aroused the hope that they would come near enough for him to join them, but in a few minutes they disappeared, and the Indians all started off in that direction. Reno's command had evidently rallied, and they all got together, so his only hope was to crawl around under the underbrush and get as near Reno's command as he could, which he could plainly see. At the same time there was a movement on another hill on the right, and he thought he saw for a moment General Custer and some officers, and then they disappeared. While quietly going through the brush he heard a whispered "Lieutenant, Lieutenant!" Then he recognized Private O'Neill of G troop and Gerard, interpreter, and Scout Jackson. The two latter had horses, but O'Neill's had been killed.

Gerard and Jackson would not desert their horses, fearing they would neigh or be seen, as Indians were passing

They hid in a deep part of the creek.

Back and forth, attracted by heavy firing on the village, which must have been the Custer fight. As they refused to leave the horses, he started with O'Neill afoot on their own hook.

At one time an Indian rode within a few feet of them, cut a switch and went on. They were then at the edge of a clearing, which they dared not cross until dark, and they hid themselves between some driftwood in a hole, placing their cartridges all around handy and ready for the expected attack.

Two shots were fired in close proximity, and they thought they were gone. Peering out, they saw that it was Indian women who were mutilating the bodies of some dead soldiers. Searching around the ground, they came so near that they were tempted to fire at them.

The Indians seemed to be, although cramped, suspicious that some were still around the bushes and so set fire to the timber. The smoke and flames forced them out of their hiding place just as Jackson and Gerard joined them, having left their horses where they first met, stuffing grass in their nostrils to prevent them from attracting attention. Wrapping their blouses around their heads, they succeeded in escaping into the thick brush along the bank of the creek. From here they saw that McDougall had joined Reno with the pack train. At the finish of the firing in the direction where Custer was hundreds of Indians returned, and the fight on the hill was kept up all night. The two scouts got their horses and, with O'Neill and De Rudio holding the tails, decided to ford the river under darkness at the place where they had crossed in the morning. By making a detour round the Indians and as it was dark they passed close to three bands of red men without molestation. O'Neill and De Rudio on the occasions keeping alongside the horses and out of sight. The fourth party came along and shouted to them in Sioux, and Jackson and Gerard cut loose and the two afoot dropped and hid in the sagebrush.

The Indians pursued the horsemen a short distance, firing shots at them, but did not see the two men in the sagebrush, although they passed in single file within three or four feet of them.

O'Neill and he reached the ford and decided to secrete themselves and wait until daylight. The moon came out but dimly, and they saw a party that looked like American cavalry, as they were on American horses and dressed in the soldier's uniform, the leader riding a sorrel horse with four white legs. He was sure that it was Captain Tom Custer. Elated, he cried out: "Hello, captain!" The rider stopped, and although they could not see him, a fiendish yell and a volley of bullets told them they were Indians. They rushed through the brush, the Indians firing at the moving bushes volley after volley. Their escape was miraculous.

It turned out afterward that these Indians by their firing spoiled a bit of stratagem they had arranged to deceive Reno by dressing in the clothes of dead soldiers of Custer's command, and, equipped with clinking sabers and on American horses, they expected to deceive him in the night by pretending to be men of Custer's party. This firing at De Rudio and giving the Indian yell put the Reno men on their guard. Proceeding on their way, two Indians came hunting for the fugitives, believing, of course, that it was only some wounded soldier. While hunting for them they approached within five yards, and, evidently having seen them, one jumped from his horse, when De Rudio fired and dropped him dead. O'Neill's carbine knocking the other one out of his saddle and killing him. The Indians in the hills saw the flash and puff and fired another volley in that direction, but the two desperate men hastily concealed themselves behind a big log which several bullets had struck. The bullets struck the ground within a few feet and even inches of them continuously.

Again the woods were fired at this point, but as it had been rainy in the evening the smoke was stronger than the flames and was thus their salvation, and they hid in a deep part of the creek with only their heads out of water, but with their cartridges and firearms on the bank ready for action. They remained there and in a little oasis of bushes that the fire had not touched, without moving or speaking, until 9 o'clock on the 26th of June. About 4 o'clock there were two signal pistol shots fired, the Indian vedette left his post at the ford and a loud voice was heard haranguing the Indians, and a band of three or four hundred passed closely and rode off. They could see them for miles down the river and heard them slugging a peculiar chant. By 6:30 they had gone as far as they could see, and it was evident that something had caused them to move away, as it appeared to them that the troops must have also left the hill.

Hungry, exhausted and dispirited, their condition can be imagined—the command gone, and they a hundred miles from the Yellowstone river! However, when everything was quiet in the dark night they started in the direction of Reno's retreat, and after about five miles they came to a high hill, from which they saw a fire. At times the fire disappeared, and they concluded that there must be human beings passing around it, which hid it occasionally from sight. But what kind of human beings—Indians or white? There was the rub. The, crawled on with great cautiousness, fearing the Indians would have to be crawled through even to reach Reno, if it was Reno, when their hearts were raised by the braying of a mule. Still, he might be a captured mule, so they crept along on their bellies cautiously until they got so near that they heard voices talking in English. They crawled within a hundred yards of the visible party and called out to the picket who they were, De Rudio and O'Neill. "For God's sake, don't shoot!" A cheer from the picket, and in a few minutes the tired and famished survivors of many mental deaths were munching crackers and coffee with Captain Varnum.

De Rudio's reception by his comrades brings to mind the time when an army was drawn up in battle line to receive me.

I will refer to one of the press dispatches sent from Terry's command to give an account of this incident:

"Our march now lay through a succession of abandoned Indian camps, showing that we were on the trail of the Sioux. The bleached bones of buffaloes and now and then the shaggy head of this monarch of the plains, testifying to the recent passage of Indian hunters, were met with from time to time scattered among the wickiups or temporary shelters made of saplings and tree branches, but so far no signs of the hostile Sioux were encountered. Our picturesque Crow and Cree allies had brought information of the near approach of the Sioux, and we were in hourly expectation that the savages would appear to dispute our progress. Plains scarred by deep canyons we passed which might conceal an army from view and yet were invisible at a few hundred yards distant. Right and left ran continuous lines of bluffs on either hand, offering positions that, defended by resolute and well armed men, would be almost impregnable.

"Suddenly, while standing around a fire at a temporary stopping place, we were startled by a quick succession of unearthly yells, and soon after a band of Crows, painted hideously, burst into camp at full gallop. They reported 'heap Sioux' coming toward us, more Sioux than they had ever seen before. This our informant expressed clearly in sign language, showing us the Sioux mounted and coming to cut our throats. The interpreter soon after arrived and confirmed our interpretation of the Indian sign language. Soon we were startled by a simultaneous rush of the Cree scouts, who announced the Sioux. The troops immediately formed in line of battle, and the scene was an animated one. Two companies of the Seventh cavalry, under Captain French and Lieutenant De Rudio, were to support the scouts in case of attack, while the column was properly arranged as well as the difficult nature of the ground would permit.

"One battalion of the Seventh cavalry, under Captain Weir, formed a mounted skirmishing line at full gallop, aided by the Second cavalry, drawn up in column on their flank under General Grisham and Lieutenant Low's battery of three guns. The trains were closed up, and the companies of the Fifth infantry, under General Miles; the Sixty-sixth, under Colonel Moore, and the Twenty-second, under Colonel Otis, were extended along the flanks and moved in the rear as supports. For a few minutes all was expectation and anxiety.

"A single horseman advanced from the timber, and there was a muttered exclamation from many mouths, 'There they come!' As we strained our ears for the report of the first gun the horseman advanced toward the skirmishers, making signs of friendship. It proved to be Bill Cody, the scout better known as 'Buffalo Bill,' dressed in the magnificence of the border fashion. He announced that we were in front of General Crook's command and said we might put off all bloody thoughts for that day. Such a reception probably no man ever received, as warm in its greeting as would have been the warmth of the reception of the hostile Sioux."

The Thundering Legion.

In the year A. D. 174 a Roman legion made up wholly or in part of Christians fought under Marcus Antonius against the Marcomanni. The Roman army were shut up in a defile and ready to perish from thirst when a severe thunderstorm, with heavy rain, relieved them of their distress and at the same time so terrified their enemies that a great victory was gained. The Christians attributed their deliverance to the prayers they had just presented and considered it miraculous, and the term "thundering legion" was applied to the soldiers.—New York American.
